

National Philatelic Exhibition · Belgrade, 7–11 October 2026

There are cities that understand philately from the inside. Belgrade is one of them. Situated at the confluence of two rivers, the city has seen so many changes in postal administrations, currencies, and state entities throughout its turbulent history that every stamp from this region serves as a small historical document. It is no coincidence that the first national philatelic exhibition in post-war Yugoslavia was held here, back in 1951.

Seventy-five years later, SERBIAFILO XVI returns to the heart of Belgrade—this time to the prestigious Serbian Armed Forces Club building on Nikola Pašić Square. From October 7 to 11, 2026, these premises will serve as a meeting place for collectors and philately enthusiasts from across the region.

The exhibition also marks a special anniversary: 160 years since the first regular Serbian postage stamp—the one bearing the image of Prince Mihailo from 1866—a stamp that holds the same significance for Serbian philately as the Penny Black does for the British.

Belgrade is a beautiful city in October—chestnut leaves, cafés that still have outdoor seating, and Kalemegdan, which never grows tiresome. If you are planning a visit, we recommend booking your accommodation in advance.
